Balint Groups

Balint groups are a powerful experiential method of training physicians in therapeutic communication and effective use of the doctor-patient relationship. They have been used to teach a wide range of professional and interpersonal competencies throughout the United States and internationally. The "Balint group" has traditionally been a group of physicians who meet regularly and present cases to better understand the doctor-patient relationship. The group focuses on enhancing the physician's ability to connect with and care for the patient.

Target Audience

The training is designed for medical educators and practicing clinicians who teach/explore the clinician-patient relationship. Trainings include physicians, psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers and mental health professionals. Residents, students and fellows, as well as community clinicians who want to learn more about Balint work, are also welcome.

Conference Description

This training offers practical, experiential learning opportunities for those who are currently leading or hope to lead Balint Groups. Small group sessions are led by two faculty members who are credentialed Balint leaders. Each session includes a Balint group followed by debriefing of group process and leader interventions. Participants have the opportunity to practice leading Balint Groups and receive feedback on their leadership skills. Each group will videorecord a Balint Group and debrief it. Critical issues of Balint work will be addressed during topic-focused discussions. During this Balint Leadership Training Intensive, a few experienced participants may be co-leading small group sessions as a part of an evaluation process by which they hope to become Credentialed Balint Group leaders. If this occurs, we may ask all members of their small group to complete an assessment of the candidate's effectiveness during one of the two sessions in which the candidate is acting as a co-leader. We believe this process furthers your learning of Balint leadership skills, in addition to offering the candidate helpful feedback.

Learning Objectives

At the end of the training, attendees will be able to:

1. Describe verbal and non-verbal leadership behaviors of Balint Group leaders
2. Demonstrate the effectiveness of different leadership interventions
3. Identify process and progression of a Balint Group, over multiple group sessions
4. Define the new perspective of the presenter as a result of the Balint Group process
